

The influence of safety food concept on animal feeding

M. POP - USAMV Iasi

Safety tends to become the most important characteristic in our food. The animal products reflect some of animal feed ingredients and food safety and quality could be affected by animal feedstuffs. The precautionary principle is necessarily to be applied and a lot of measures should be implemented to eliminate an unacceptable risk to the consumer. Involved challenges concerning animal feeding consist in alternatives to antimicrobial growth promoters (AGP) use, natural alternatives to chemical additives replacement of inorganic minerals by organic forms and substitution of some animal protein sources by microbial (genetically non-modified) or vegetal proteins in animal diets.
