

The importance of legislating the electronic commerce in agriculture

Nicoleta-Rodica DOMINTE - Technical University "Gh. Asachi" Iași

The electronic commerce is a new step concerning the development of agricultural commerce. The legislation of the relationship between the electronic commerce and agriculture means the establishment of a legal base for the commercial operations. The advantages, disadvantages and the importance of legislating the electronic commerce in agriculture will be analysed taking into consideration the questionnaire handed to a number of 43 agricultural engineers.