I've got the feeling that the Helens and the Romanians have a the same virtuoso fate. It seems that nothing can keep them apart and great many things bring us close together. The common cultural development of our nations can't be accidental. It is based on the fact that the Roumanians always belived in the strenght of the helenic spirit, in the way of the humanism and catholicity, in the values, language and in the signification of this spirit's ideas. It is what helped us build a common national believe.
