For the first time the quality level of the Dunărea Hidrografical Basin was international followed in December 13-th 1985 after "The Bucharest Declaration", the first declaration signed by all Danube crossed countries. This declaration established a series of measures and principles on common agreement. After 1991 once the political communist regime collapsed the will of tighter collaboration for aquatic environment protection, led to the Danube Convention signing in October 22 1998.
