

Globalisation – A linguistic phenomenon ?

Simona Catrinel AVARVAREI - USAMV Iasi

We are witnessing a period of time, which may be rightfully considered as the dusk of borders, of any kind of limitation. Globalisation has been described, over the past 20 years, as a natural condition of the present and future, a current phenomenon that extends its roots into the outlook of mankind. Globalisation is mainly a story with a financial, and political core, but, nowadays, nobody can ignore its linguistic dimension.