The economic and social environment where the agricultural exploitations run in Romania and in Republic of Moldova become more complex and, in the same time, generator of risks. Such evolutions occur on the framework of some essential movements into economical activity: the trend of economical relations globalization, the increase of changes rhythm, knowledge changes for special resources on which depends the competitive advantage. The major role for rural area belongs to an efficient management which could solve the problem of efficient leadership of the process of optimum, equilibrate and right proportional development of agricultural exploitations.
