This paper presents a series of environmental index. Expansion of global capital markets and information technology continue to bring unprecedented opportunities for the creation of new wealth. While governmental and nongovernmental entities are major players in the globalisation process, it is corporate activity that remains its driving force. The result: all parties - including corporations - are seeking new forms of accountability that credibly describe the consequences of business activities wherever, whenever, and however they occur. The environment evaluation could be realised from ecologic view, from economic view or conjunct view. To national and international level exists a number of scientific and legislative successful which facilitates the researches for the creation of a statistic-economics analysis system from perspective of economical - environment relation.
