

Dear colleagues,

this email is to inform you about a new opportunity for the students.

The Faculty of Veterinary Medicine and Animal Productions of Federico II has officially opened its Center for Monitoring Parasitic Infections in Livestock (Centro Regionale per il Monitoraggio delle Parassitosi – CREMOPAR) to the Erasmus Program.

The Center, born in 2000 through a collaboration between the Faculty and Regione Campania, is set in the countryside.

In addition to its main goal, it offers the students the opportunity of buiatrics practice and free accomodation.

Prof. Giuseppe Cringoli, Professor of Parasitic Diseases, would be glad to host Erasmus students.

Those who are interested in spending part or all their traineeship at the Center would be covered by the Erasmus program insurance.

I would be pleased if you may share this info with the students of your faculties.

For every doubt or further info, don't hesitate to contact me or Prof. Laura Rinaldi, our Erasmus Coordinator (mail: laura.rinaldi@unina.it).

Kind regards,
Giovanni Palermo